MILLETS PRODUCE

Millets can be called as nutritional storehouses. They are far ahead of rice and wheat in terms of minerals, calcium and fibre. Finger millet has 30 times higher calcium content than rice and it can be strongly stated that every other millet has at least twice higher calcium than rice. Millets like foxtail and little millet are rich in iron and the betacarotene content. The amount of micro nutrients in millets can never be compared with any other food. Millets are seen as solution to malnutrition by experts and they are highly advocated by agriculturists since they are climate compliant, independent of synthetic fertilizers, pest free and amazingly low water consumption.
